

Nora Mardirossian

Nora Mardirossian leads the Columbia Center on Sustainable Investment's work on aligning food sector companies' practices with the UN Sustainable Development Goals. Nora trained as a lawyer and has worked as a researcher and policy advisor on topics related to human rights, sustainable development, responsible business conduct and reporting, and the responsibilities of institutional investors and development finance institutions. Nora has advised multinational companies on their approaches to meeting international human rights expectations.