

Christina Archer

Christina has been working for the last 30 years on sustainability issues, starting her career in overseas development before moving into managing corporate responsibility programmes. She has worked with non-governmental organisations, multi-national businesses, small-medium enterprises and community groups across Latin America, Asia, and Europe. She has worked for the last four years with the Sustainable Food Lab and UNDP, focusing on sustainability and stakeholder engagement in the food/agriculture sector, providing support and advice to clients in the private, NGO, UN and donor sectors on sustainable supply chain development, markets and livelihoods, value chain and participatory market development for poverty reduction, policy development, economic empowerment for women and youth participation.